37. Undset, Sigrid. "Finland Fights for Life – Her Own and That of Europe: Lies and Terror are the Soviet and Nazi Weapons." America 62 (March 2, 1940): 565-566.

Sigrid Undset recounts the heroic fight waged by the Finnish nation against the Russian army, a force exceedingly superior in numbers. She says Finland fights for her life as a nation, but her battle concerns the whole civilized world. It is a battle for the future of all Europe, and for the future of the Americas, too.

185. New York Times 19 (July 26, 1943): 2.

Sigrid Undset participated in the Emergency Conference to Save the Jewish People of Europe. She denounced anti-Semitism, saying "It is the right of the Jewish nation to get the opportunity to defend itself in the future from a national stronghold, as an independent nation, in possession of all the organs of a national life of its own."

186. New York Times 5 (November 1, 1943): 4.

Sigrid Undset participated in a rally where a petition was circulated among 3,300 people present, calling upon the president to establish intergovernment agency to save the Jewish people of Europe. Undset expressed "the hope that those who could not be saved have not suffered in vain, that their blood may help to drown the poisen-snake of race discrimination everywhere in the world, where people yearn to govern themselves in a way compatible with human dignity."

187. New York Times 18 (December 23, 1943): 6.

Letter from Sigrid Undset to the editor of the New York Times concerning a small article on December 20 about fifty-two children of Danish-Jewish parents, aged one to twelve years, who had been sent to Germany from a Copenhagen freight station.
